"The models which can be obtained for hire are beautiful, without doubt. I have sought in vain for the dignity and purity which I have never seen united but in a noble lady, who would disclaim to sit to a poor artist." The animated and ardent glance of Van Dyck embarrassed Lucy; it told however, had not observed it, and asked:

"Who is this noble lady?" "The virgin herself, madam?" ing profoundly, and giving a parting glance at Lucy, he added: "If I gain the prize you shall see me again, madame; if not I leave England."

He took immediate possession of his apartments, where he could at the same time paint his Madonna and copy the frescoes for the chapel. Wich his mind full of the celestial face he had just seen he seized his pencil and endeavored to trace her lineaments.
